Whether we've made it back to them or not, offices are usually somewhere we spend a lot of our working lives.

In considering winners for this category, judges will look at functionality, aesthetics that foster collaborative work and creative thought, how a company's brand, culture and ethos have been translated into the overall scheme from the reception area and break-out zones to meeting rooms, alongside the specific design features and bespoke elements, which enhance the efficiency of the workplace and promote the well-being of the staff.
